

“We believe that working side by side works better than by taking sides.”

Purchin Consulting services are ideal for educational institutions and family resource and empowerment organizations. Bookings are available for customized trainings (often based on - and including - the book), as well as the following:

In person and virtual “Book Club” sessions, in which we lead participants through select chapters of the book and practice suggested exercises. Each session allows time for questions and the possibility to troubleshoot an actual challenging situation.

Six 30-minute audio PODCASTS, each dedicated to expanding on key chapters/skills in the book, are a bonus feature. These are casual conversations and interviews with top professionals who use our communication skills and strategies on a daily basis. The podcasts provide added dimensions and memorable illustrations to the topics.

Live monthly VIRTUAL OFFICE HOURS at 12 noon (PST) on the first Tuesday of each month (Sept. thru June); offered to readers who'd like to “drop by” and share or inquire about anything related to the book. It also serves as a “safe place” to practice/workshop exercises in the workbook. Plus it's a golden opportunity to learn from each other.

A handful of good reasons to use this book:

- When schools and parents collaborate to solve problems, they avoid legal due process.
- Positive and productive communication makes for supportive campus communities.
- Students model the behavior of school personnel and parents who work well together.
- The emphases of this book align with Common Core mandates in communication.
- It's the right thing to do for our children.
